This is an ongoing clinical case conference series offered by the CTA. This teaching model has been useful for helping clinicians and front-line staff better understand the neurodevelopmental principles involved in many of the primary symptoms as well as strengths in the children they serve. This practical teaching model provides an opportunity for ongoing capacity building within an institution or for individuals.

We recommend this series as a complement to any more intensive training/program development projects that our partners have with the CTA. However, individual and institutional participation does not require any other program development activities or projects with the CTA and can serve as a good introduction to viewing maltreated and traumatized children through the “lens” of neurodevelopment.

Please note the orientation session is to familiarize individuals and organizations with the LiveMeeting methods and the overall NMT approach. The Live Meeting software has improved with significant changes in audio and video potentials. This orientation session will also provide an overview and rationale for the assessment elements that will help create the clinical abstracts used throughout the series.

Information regarding subscription and CEUs follows on the next two pages. Please note that the CTA will sponsor a different and complementing quarterly training series throughout the year. Organizations or individuals seeking an annual LiveMeeting pass to the CTA Case-based Training Series (over 45 hrs of training and clinical consultation plus supplemental training materials such as slides, articles and annotated bibliographies) may contact the CTA using the contact information below.
