

Gizane Indart, Psy.D.

Gizane Indart, PsyD. is the Executive Director of the Denver Children's Advocacy Center. Bilingual and bicultural, she was educated and trained in Argentina as well as the United States. She holds a Doctorate in Clinical Child Psychology (1987), and a Masters of Arts in Counseling Psychology (1997). She is a Licensed Professional Counselor in the State of Colorado.

Dr. Indart has over 17 years of working experience with traumatized children and their families. She is a seasoned public speaker and trainer who has presented locally, nationally and internationally on the impact of abuse and neglect in early development, attachment difficulties in children exposed to maltreatment, and sexualized behaviors in children. She authored a chapter about the short-term outcomes of sexual abuse in the book The Web of Meaning, Gail Ryan and Associates (1999, Safer Society Press).

In addition, Dr. Indart has served on the Kempe Children's Center Perpetration Prevention Study Group since 1992; is a member of the International Society for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect and is a member of the Board of Directors for the Colorado Coalition of Adoptive Families. In March 2010, Dr. Indart received the National Children's Advocacy Center's Outstanding Service Award for demonstrated excellence in developing a collaborative approach to protecting children from the devastating impact of child sexual abuse and exploitation and for her role in building and supporting an outstanding Multidisciplinary Team.
