NMT Training Certification: Brief Overview

The Neurosequential Model of Therapeutics (NMT) is a neurodevelopmentally informed, biologically respectful perspective on human development and functioning and is used in the clinical problem-solving process. NMT Training Certification is a training process meant to certify exposure to and participation in training activities. This training is a clinical enhancement, capacity building project providing exposure to core concepts underlying the NMT and to the clinical applications of this approach. The primary focus of Phase I training is to build comfort with, and experience in, organizing clinical information in a neurodevelopmentally-informed way; a primary objective of Certification is to develop competence with the web-based NMT Clinical Practice Tools (the NMT Metrics which yields Brain Maps). Participants are provided multiple opportunities to see multidisciplinary clinical problem solving using the NMT approach in many case-based staffings that are part of the learning process.

The majority of NMT Training Certification is conducted via distance learning using web-archived materials that allow participants to work through the content in a self-paced and self-scheduled manner. The format is incredibly convenient. While this flexibility is truly welcomed, many professionals appreciate interactive opportunities to connect with their fellow NMT learners and practitioners. NMT Boot Camp provides this face-to-face learning experience.
