NME Trainers Program: Brief Overview

The Neurosequential Model in Education (NME) brings The ChildTrauma Academy's neurodevelopmental and trauma-informed approach to the classroom. Our goal is to educate faculty and students in basic concepts of neurosequential development and how to apply this knowledge to the teaching and learning process. The NME curriculum provides an introduction to important concepts about how the brain works, develops, changes and is impacted by developmental adversity including trauma. It provides practical application of these key concepts that can be useful in everyday educational settings and a Classroom Functional Map that allows teachers a simple and rapid way to assess their students' relative brain-mediated strengths and weaknesses.

The majority of the NME Trainer's Program is conducted via distance learning using web-archived materials that allow participants to work through the content in a self-paced and self-scheduled manner. The format is incredibly convenient. While this flexibility is truly welcomed, many professionals appreciate interactive opportunities to connect with their fellow NME learners and practitioners. NME Boot Camp provides this face-to-face learning experience.

2018 NME Trainers Program Boot Camp: Banff, Alberta, Canada

The ChildTrauma Academy is pleased to offer a Boot Camp for our NME Trainers Program at The Banff Centre in Banff, Alberta, Canada. The NME Trainers Program Boot Camp begins at the start of the 3rd International Neurosequential Model Symposium on Tuesday, June 12, 2018. NME Boot Camp participants attend a specified NME Boot Camp Track throughout the three day Symposium (June 12 – 14, 2018) and concludes with a full-day of training on Friday, June 15, 2018. Limited to 30 participants, this Boot Camp is a live, face-to-face learning experience led by Dr. Bruce Perry, CTA's NME Project Director Steve Graner, and CTA Fellows.

All NME Boot Camp participants will automatically be registered to attend the three day Symposium (the symposium registration fee of $738 USD will be waived). A Boot Camp Only registration is not possible. Please note that participants must bring their own laptop computers to Boot Camp.

NME Trainers Program Curriculum

The ChildTrauma Academy's NME Trainers Program is based on a "Train the Trainer" model. In its current phase, CTA has developed three sets of online modules which are included in the current NME Trainers Program curriculum:

- 5-Session Introduction to NME Series (5 total training hours)
- 10-Session Case-based Series (15 total training hours)
- 5-Session Classroom Tools/Minimap Series (5 total training hours)

Trainers complete these modules along with other required elements either alone or in small groups, receiving online support from our NME Project Director and a cohort of NME Fellows in Education and advanced NME Trainers from other schools and communities.

The NME Boot Camp, conducted in retreat style fashion, is a terrific way to kick off the NME Trainers Program and provides an opportunity for in-person learning and relationship-building. The NME Boot Camp will boost the learning process for NME Trainers and better prepare them to provide professional development and on-site support within their own schools and school districts.

Once training is completed, the NME Trainers join a worldwide network of NME practitioners who share best practices on an ongoing basis. New materials created by the ChildTrauma Academy to support NME trainers will be shared routinely as this community continues to grow.
